

SATURDAY, AUGUST 26th, 2023 - 2 PM U.S. Senior Amateur Weather Forecast

Abundance of sunshine with not a single cloud present throughout the entire central part of the state this afternoon. Cool temps hung around until 9 AM before heating at the surface took control allowing temps to quickly jump into the 70s just before 10 AM. This trend will continue into the afternoon with highs still on pace to top out in the low 80s as any cloud formation is expected to occur to our east across Carson City and Reno. Winds speeds are down today as expected as flow has made its transition over to the SW just before noon where it will remain into the late afternoon before then shifting over to the WSW as play finishes up this evening with speeds averaging 6 - 8 mph gusting into the low teens tapering off as we get closer to sunset then becoming light and variable overnight allowing for another cool start to things SUN as temps bottom out in the mid 40s for setup. The final round of stroke play looks to be more of the same, lots of sunshine as temps climb back into the low 80s tomorrow afternoon while winds once again do their dance starting out weak from the SE before increasing in intensity late morning from the SW.
