

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 30th, 2023 - 6 AM U.S. Senior Amateur Weather Forecast

Near perfect conditions await us for quarters and semis today. Clear skies overnight has allowed temperatures to fall all the way down to 40 degrees giving us the colder start to WED that we expected. But, like we have seen for the majority of the championship, once the sun finds its way over the horizon the cool start will become a distant memory with temps quickly climbing into the 70s just after 10 AM topping out once again in the mid 80s this afternoon as the two matches are about to make the turn. High pressure sitting along the CA/OR border to our NW will keep our winds in check from those seen TUE, starting out the morning blowing from the ENE before quickly shifting over to the WSW as the high drifts eastward across the southern OR border. For the final THU, another, stronger system pushes down from the PNW that is expected to impact conditions across Martis Camp into the weekend. Similar to TUE, breezy conditions out in front of this boundary will have winds across the area gusting up to 30 mph tomorrow afternoon as clouds look to return overhead keeping highs in check as we crown a champion for 2023.
