

MONDAY, JULY 10th, 2023 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

A blanket of clouds around will starve our temperatures, keeping them tucked in the low-mid 70s through the majority of the morning. Keep a light jacket and umbrella handy for the Flag Raising with some light showers and drizzle pushing our way across southern North Carolina. These moderate to mostly light showers will persist into the early afternoon and make for a gloomy first round. Our thick cloud cover and light winds will lend to temperatures much cooler than we have been accustomed to as we will be lucky to tip close to the mid 80s this afternoon. Clouds finally start to peel off later in the day and we will see a mostly clear night with a low temperature in the upper 60s. Weak, but welcoming high pressure settles in just to our north and will shed some of our lower level moisture Tuesday into Wednesday and significantly lower our chance for any precipitation. Despite the lower moisture, temperatures will warm back above average for this time of year.
