

THURSDAY, JULY 6, 2023 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

We can't seem to shake overcast skies easily. Today offers a slightly better chance of sunshine in the afternoon, but a thick marine layer will make it difficult. Western-based winds will increase through the late AM, becoming breezy this afternoon with peak gusts in the lower 20s. The wind will eventually end up from the west-northwest this evening, setting the stage for a gusty weekend. Friday will see a familiar morning overcast, but the wind does not completely relax in the morning hours. Instead, the wind will push to be stronger from the west-northwest, gusting in the 25 - 28 mph neighborhood Friday afternoon. This rigid wind pattern is sustained through the weekend, allowing bits of sunshine to take over the afternoon sky. Saturday is going to feel like the most windy day, as morning wind speeds hang around the 6 - 12 mph range and gusts around 25 mph become common in the afternoon. Thrive in today's relatively peaceful conditions!
