We received 0.39" in total. Mist/clouds/sprinkles may stick around through the first half of the morning, before a warm up into the upper 60s. Light winds out of the northwest in the morning will become variable in direction through the day, staying under 15 mph in flitting gusts. The 12 to 5 PM timeframe is still on track for showers and weak thunderstorms to develop. Then, a gentle Thursday night is anticipated. Friday introduces a stronger breeze, out of the west/northwest, gusting up to 30 mph. Still targeting 3 to 7 PM as the timeframe of concern for Friday's thunderstorms, as a system moves in to clear things up for the weekend. Lingering shower chances can't be completely ruled out Saturday or Sunday, but the odds remain in our favor after Friday's near-certain mess.
