

TUESDAY, JULY 15, 2025 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

We enter another hot July day. The distinct difference of today's atmosphere is the ability to form thunderstorms after 1 PM. The most likely timeframe of impact is 4 to 8 PM, lingering through the late evening. Stationary downpours will be difficult to pinpoint, but there is a chance of 1"+ amounts in any given cell. The daily threat of thunderstorms persists through the end of the week, with temperatures returning to average for this time of year. Wind speeds will be negligible as we remain entrenched in this pattern. To avoid the worst-case rainfall totals, we need to be effective in dodging rainfall cores!
