

SATURDAY, MAY 19th, 2023 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Other than some low level clouds to kick off Stroke Play, conditions look fantastic heading into the afternoon with cloud cover decreasing and a high temperature warming around 80 degrees. Fairly light winds will favor play, but influence more bugs around, especially in the hole locations closer to the marsh and water. A more southerly flow takes shape this afternoon and evening with the help of the seabreeze, but also ahead of the approaching cold front later tonight into tomorrow morning. Clouds will be on the increase early Sunday morning with a 40% chance of some rain showers and even a few rumbles of thunder. Additional chances for a few showers and storms during the afternoon and evening as this front slowly falls apart just south of the area along portions of Hilton Head and Savannah, Georgia. Winds will do a funky dance and become a bit more tricky in direction with the weak front to the south Sunday evening. We look to stay mostly dry Monday with slightly cooler temperatures, but begin to see our winds pick up out of the north and east making our way towards Wednesday.
