

TUESDAY, AUGUST 22, 2023 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Cloudier skies take over for today, keeping high temperatures moderate in the mid 70s. A southern wind component is introduced, but gusts remain below 20 mph today. Peak wind speeds will be experienced in the evening time, before we run into the chance for overnight sprinkles/showers. The heightened threat of rain showers exists early Wednesday morning, around day break, but no lightning is expected with these weak showers. After that, we have another 80-degree day in store as clouds move out for Wednesday afternoon. Thursday introduces more heat, creeping into the 90s. We enter a period of unsettled weather Thursday night into Friday morning, where an elevated risk of thunder is presented. The timeframe of 12 AM to 7 AM Friday is the focus for these storm cells. Otherwise, each afternoon features a low chance of disruptive weather as the region maintains a similar warm pattern through the end of the weekend.
