

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 30th, 2023 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

The sun will dominate the sky once again with a nice, but windy day in store for the first round. These winds out of the southwest will pick up this afternoon and also help keep our high temperature right near 90 degrees. With all this wind and very low humidity has prompted the Red Flag Warning across much of the region for fire danger. We should stay dry at night into Sunday, but still could see a few clouds sneak into our area alongside the very low chance of anything falling out of them. Sunday should feel a lot different with temperatures only pushing in the low 80s with more of that breeziness around in the afternoon. The sun will fight off a few clouds early in the day while these dry conditions look to persist. Cooler air will also persist into early week with some of our low temperatures falling way down near 60 degrees. Beautiful weather on tap midweek, just in time for the final rounds.
