

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5th, 2023 – 7 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Mild and quite windy for the first thing this morning with gusts right in the low 20s at times. This northeasterly flow will begin to slacken over the next hour or two, in perfect timing of the final match. I will not need my high tech pinwheel for the afternoon as they will weaken further and become more southerly. Sunny skies and warmer temperature are the theme again as we heat back up in the low 90s later in the day. Very low humidity will establish late afternoon and evening, which could influence the ongoing fires to our northeast and possibly render some smokiness. We will look to pick up a few high clouds this evening and overnight, otherwise another mostly clear and windy night in store. These gusty winds out of the northeast will likely keep trending in the morning of each day, while we look to stay mostly dry heading into the weekend. More clouds will be around as temperatures stay consistent, but warmer than average for this time of year.
