

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 17th, 2022 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

After yesterday's super soaker that brought 2.23" of rain, let's lick our wounds and enjoy a little sunshine to start off the morning. Some lingering clouds just after sunrise should lend to peaks of sun through the early and mid morning, before clouds jump back into the mix by lunchtime. Our temperatures will climb through the 80s, trying to touch near 90 degrees. This long drawn out war continues today with the 60% chance for a pop-up storm or shower increasing by the mid-afternoon. Radar will likely look similar to yesterday with the mess to form along the coast with the seabreeze being the antagonist. Winds will continue to stay manageable, but slightly shift with a northeast swing early next week. This flow ahead of the approaching Fiona will try to reduce the amount of moisture aloft and have us look for some better conditions leading into midweek and the final rounds of the Championship.
