

TUESDAY, AUGUST 30th, 2022 - 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Despite a mild and mid 70s start to the day, breezy conditions this morning might signal the need for a light windbreaker. Our flags will be churning this morning and afternoon with gusty winds capable of nearing the upper 20s/30mph at times. The high temperature will once again be slow to climb through the upper 70s as it struggles for the low 80s this afternoon. We will see a mix of sun and clouds throughout the day with an increase in cloud cover overnight and into Wednesday. An isolated shower/storm is possible after midnight with a weak low slinging just southeast of the area, but primarily staying dry and cloudy. The next chance for a shower/storm comes with the fairly dry cold front to our west. It will try to bring a thin line of showers/storms onto the area first thing in the morning with low anticipated accumulation. Its passage late morning will lend to a drier, but still gusty second half of the day. Our winds will slowly take on a more westerly component heading into Thursday in before high pressure and cooler/drier air filters back into the region later Thursday.
