

TUESDAY, JULY 18, 2023 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Today we start a bit warmer as we are already in the 70s this morning with clouds clearing to a bright sunrise for us. Our clear skies will not last long however with clouds beginning to flood overhead in the early afternoon hours. As the clouds begin to roll in, our chances of rain begin to increase as well. We will hit our high temp of 88 degrees in the early to mid afternoon because of some showers and possible storms. We could begin to see these showers and possible storms as early as noon today, and our chances stay into the evening hours. Wednesday morning will start out in the 60s and warm into the 80s by the afternoon, but like today that is where we will hit our high due to showers and storms charging into the area. The shower and storm chances stay elevated into the evening hours on Wednesday. We will have a similar experience on Thursday as well with a clearer and dry start to the day, but giving way to rain and storms in the afternoon. On Friday our chances of afternoon showers begin to fall, but they stay far from 0%. On Saturday our chances of showers and storms fall again but a passing shower can still not be ruled out for the final day of play.
