

WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 2023 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

This morning we are starting out mostly cloudy and in the 60s. We will clear up slightly in the mid to late morning, but the clearer skies will be short lived as we will begin to see thunderstorms in the afternoon. We will reach our high of 80 early in the afternoon. The thunderstorms today could be strong to severe, even possibly dropping hail, and the chance of storms sticks with us into the evening to overnight hours. Tomorrow we will start off a little cooler, in the 50s, and will only get into the 70s by the afternoon. We will have a slight chance of rain early in the morning of Friday, but the clouds should burn off quickly in the morning again. The showers come back into the forecast as our chances of afternoon showers rear their ugly head and these showers will have a chance of these showers becoming thunderstorms in the afternoon as well. Saturday we finally look to have a drier day as we will lose a lot of our moisture aloft giving low chances of afternoon showers and sunshine for most of the day.
